6. OUTREACH COORDINATOR POSITION. The City Council considered a recommendation to reconfirm their previous action and continue the authorization of hiring a full-time Outreach

Coordinator position to work in collaboration with the County of Santa Barbara as well as other community partners in addressing youth violence issues in the City.

City Manager Haydon gave a presentation as detailed in the Council Agenda Report. With the recent increase in violence over the last 18 months, there has been a grassroots effort in community meeting forums. The One Community Action Coalition brought together educators, the faith-based community, non-profit groups, and public-sector agencies to discuss obstacles impeding positive reform in youth violence and identify current resources available to help mitigate the problem in the community. Both the City and the County began working on a position to specifically address the situation. City staff proposed a part-time position of an Outreach Coordinator and Fifth District Supervisor Lavagnino secured $75,000 from the County's General Fund toward the effort. The City entered into discussions with Supervisor Lavagnino and, after reassessing the situation, City staff recommended a full-time Outreach Coordinator position be approved at the July 11th City Council meeting. The City Council approved the position, but requested that staff continue collaborating with the County of Santa Barbara to explore the possibility of either a shared employee or shared-funded employee with the County of Santa Barbara.

Further discussion led staff to decide to hire a full-time Outreach Coordinator and the County to decide to also hire a full-time position, similar to the Coordinator of the South Coast Task Force on Youth Safety through the Community Action Commission (CAC), to represent the North County. As proposed these two positions would staff the proposed policy/advisory committee and head-up a technical committee which would be able to implement a strategic plan addressing the reduction of youth violence in the City.

Over the last two years, the City has had 24 homicides and the Police Department has been able to identify 19 (80 percent) of the assailants. Nationwide, the average rate of solved homicides is approximately 40 percent and gang activity has been curbed with the recent arrests of several members of the MS-13 street gang. City Manager Haydon stated that Ernesto Oliveras, Executive Director of the California Cities Violence Prevention Network, recognized the work of the Police Department and advised that an effective program involved collaboration with other partners. Working collaboratively would also help make a program or partnership eligible for State and Federal funding.

Examples of successful programs throughout the State of California include cities that have a relationship with the California Cities Violence Prevention Network. Santa Rosa has a Mayor's Gang Prevention Task Force, a 40-member policy team that appoints an operational team. City staff are part of the operational team. The Prevention Task Force establishes policies, strategies, and goals under the umbrella of their mission to reclaim youth for their families, schools, communities, and future. They are funded through a ¼ percent sales tax measure that was passed a number of years ago.

San Bernardino's program is called Operation Phoenix and involves 30 partner agencies with the mission of suppression, intervention and prevention. This program is also funded with a ¼ cent sales tax.

San Jose has a Mayor's Gang Prevention Task Force, a 35-member policy team of community leaders and a technical team. San Jose operates under their mission of safe and healthy youth connected to their families, schools, communities, and their future and receives $4 million in direct funding from the City's General Fund.

City Manager Haydon noted that the South Coast has several agencies that have come together to combat youth violence. The cities of Santa Barbara, Goleta, Carpinteria, and the County of Santa Barbara created a task force called the South Coast Youth Safety Task Force. Their mission is to improve and support the safety and quality of life for youth, their families, and the community. Funding for this task force is provided by each city contributing to a fund overseen by the Community Action Commission (CAC). The Commission then has its own employee to work as their coordinator.

The salary for the proposed Outreach Coordinator position would be $45,000 to $56,000 annually. The position would provide direct support to the proposed policy/advisory committee and be on an operational committee working in collaboration with the County of Santa Barbara employee. Both employees would be located at the Maldonado Youth Center. The intent of the positions would be to “work the plan but not plan the work.”

Councilmember Zuniga asked why one shared position between the County and City was not viable. She also asked if there had been any discussion about the success of the program in the South County and why something similar could not be established in the North County.

City Manager Haydon explained that during discussions with the County, questions arose as to whether the position would be a City employee or County employee. The County would be a civil service system while the City would be a merit-based system. The County and City have different MOU's. The City position would be under SEIU and the benefit levels were also different between the two. From a supervisory and funding perspective, the idea of a shared position became very complicated.

With regard to the South County program, the CAC was the fiscal agent and the position worked for the Board. The idea of having a North County fiscal agent, such as CAC or Fighting Back Santa Maria Valley, was discussed. The City and County decided it made more sense to each hire their own full-time position. It was also agreed that having two positions might be beneficial sharing the workload of the coordination of a 35-plus member policy committee.

Councilmember Boysen commented that the actual oversight of the position and work would come from the policy/action committee and that he was unclear as to why having a North County fiscal agent would not work. The City's relationship with C3H was set up in this way and seemed to be working. He expressed concern that going in staff's proposed direction would create just another bureaucracy. He also stated the Council was being asked to approve funding per year with a re-evaluation each year.

City Manager Haydon responded that since the position would be for the City of Santa Maria, the salary for the position would leave the City with a fiduciary responsibility to the taxpayers to make sure that the City could direct some of the work of the individual filling the position from a performance standpoint. Giving the money to the County of Santa Barbara would relinquish that control. The concept would be that the Outreach Coordinator would be working with the City's Police Lieutenant, the Deputy City Manager, and Recreation and Services Manager. The four of them would provide direct staff support to the Policy Committee.

Councilmember Orach commented that he wanted to remind people that C3H had taken a few years to develop specific deliverables. He expressed concern that the County might not pay attention to the City's needs going forward and he believed Council should approve the proposed position.

Councilmember Waterfield commented that Mr. Oliveras had indicated he was the City employee who took charge of the program in Santa Rosa and that the other cities had a similar position and the programs were working.

City Manager Haydon agreed saying that Mr. Oliveras had been a veteran of the Santa Rosa Police Department with vast experience in youth violence prevention. He became a Councilmember and continued working their youth violence prevention program. Since then, they had formed a non-profit with Mr. Oliveras as the Executive Director. For his agency, having a City employee was instrumental in getting the program established.

Mayor Patino asked when Santa Rosa and San Bernardino had established their ¼ percent sales tax.

City Manager Haydon said it was not a recent action, but had been established quite a while ago. Santa Rosa applied 80 percent of the revenue toward public safety and 20 percent toward the task force and strategic goals the task force implemented.

Public Input

Pati Cantu, speaking as a member of One Community Action Commission, requested the City come up with a strategic plan to combat violence in Santa Maria. She also said she hoped the position would collaborate with the Compadres Program and the Santa Maria Valley Youth and Family Center, in addition to Fighting Back Santa Maria.

Arnulfo Romero expressed his concern that a $50,000 salary would not bring in a person qualified enough to fill the position. He also said he wished the Council and City staff would make more effort to engage with the community.

Virginia Esparza-Gonzalez, a longtime resident of the City, commented that she was surprised that a decision on who would be in control of the program had not been determined. She said she took her son out of a public high school and enrolled him in private school because of her concern for his safety in the City. She encouraged the Council to fill the position with someone holding a more advanced degree who truly understood social systems.

Pete Flores, representing One Community Action Coalition, encouraged the Council to partner with Supervisor Lavagnino and the County of Santa Barbara and expand the position to hire someone with more experience and a higher degree than what was listed on the job description.

Hector Sanchez commented that, as a Candidate for Council, he had been walking the City and visiting with the elderly and various businesses. He expressed concern that businesses may choose not to set up in Santa Maria if the situation does not improve and that the elderly he met were intimidated by the recent violence. He also stated he did not believe the proposed salary for the position was high enough.

Mary Solorio Jacka, representing LULAC, stated she was insulted by the proposed salary for the Outreach Coordinator position. She suggested taking the funds from the General Fund and requested that agencies receiving money from the Community Development Block Grants come forward in the collaboration. She requested that the Council go into crisis mode and find the money to fill the position.

Council discussion

Councilmember Zuniga reminded everyone that City Councilmembers were elected by the community to represent the community. The community expected the Councilmembers to treat each other with respect and operate with dignity and she requested that each person on the dais be treated equally and given the same time to speak and ask questions.

Councilmember Boysen recalled that, at the time the Coordinator position was approved, the Council was approving a budgeted $48,000 for a position that collaborated with the County. He commented that once benefits are added to the salary, the position will be about a $65,000 to $80,000 position. He said he could not support the proposed position but wanted to continue working with the County of Santa Barbara whether it be through a non-profit or joint powers agency to create a more impactful position.

Councilmember Zuniga commented that the success of the previously mentioned cities cost millions of dollars. She suggested moving past the fear of losing control of the project and looking at what is in the best interest of the community. She also commented that United Way was the fiscal agent for Americorps and several other agencies. She expressed concern that if the position were an employee of the City, that person would not have the authority to get County Department Heads to the table. She said she believed splitting the workload between two separate positions would lead to communication breakdowns. She also said she believed the success of the program would depend heavily on community involvement and increased collaboration with the County. All five County Supervisors voted in favor of the Outreach Coordinator position and she encouraged the City to continue collaborating with them.

Councilmember Orach commented that he agreed everyone was concerned about decreasing violence in the City. He stated he believed that a coordinator bringing County, non-profit, community members and City staff together would be a good start. Having the County Outreach Coordinator position would enhance the City's Outreach Coordinator position by bringing County Department Heads to the table. He said he felt the position would be a good start.

Councilmember Waterfield commented that she believed a "boots on the ground" Outreach Coordinator would be best. She said that the Mayor would be the lead who would bring County Department Heads to the table. She expressed support for the proposed Outreach Coordinator position.

City Manager Haydon commented that Supervisor Lavagnino had specified that the person leading the South Coast Task Force was a Coordinator that makes approximately the same amount in salary as the proposed City position. A consultant would be hired to guide the policy committee through a strategic plan. The City had engaged the high school district to help with funding for a comprehensive violence prevention strategic plan. The City also approached the elementary school district and a couple of Foundations for additional funding. He stressed that there were two points of view being discussed – a coordinator that would "work the plan" versus a coordinator that would "plan the work", and he said the request to have someone with a Master's Degree would be addressed by those on the policy committee, not necessarily in the coordinator position.

Mayor Patino commented she had always supported funding youth causes. She stated the City was short about $4.4 million in its General Fund, so we could not just pull the money from the General Fund to finance the Outreach Coordinator position. She said she would not be adverse to a ¼ percent sales tax increase specifically for this cause. She said she supported the Coordinator as an employee of Santa Maria and approving the position would be a good start.

Direction to staff

Staff was directed to move forward with the Outreach Position as presented, on motion by Councilmember Orach, seconded by Councilmember Waterfield, and carried on the following vote: 3-2
